The editorial designer spent most of his career on the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel staff, drawing for The newspaper for 25 years. After being deposed Art Wood, a political cartoonist himself, collected more than 16,000 political cartoons from hundreds of the main creators of art 'Urgentlemanly', a phrase that is commonly used to describe this type of graphic satire. He used the word "illustration" to describe the enormous talent and craftsmanship that went to a work of art produced to capture a moment over time. From the 19th century Gilded at recent times, political illustrations have appeared in magazines, editorial pages, opinion pages, and also on the front pages of American newspapers. These visual editorials reflect more points of view transmitted by a wide range of approaches including Harper's Weekly Thomas Nast's classic cross hatching techniques, Ding Ding's brush sweeping work the rich crayon line work of Rube Goldberg and Bill Mauldin, and the painterly styles of contemporary cartoonists Paul Conrad and Patrick Oliphant. The broad spectrum of political perspectives informs our understanding not only of the past but also of the present. Thomas Nast Senator James G. Blaine was an extremely popular Republican politician in the nineteenth century. He might have been elected president if he had not been continually dogged by charges of corruption. In 1888, when Blaine returned from a lengthy European trip, he refused to run for president, and instead supported Benjamin Harrison's campaign. However, Blaine's enormous popularity caused cartoonist Thomas Nast (1840¢ÂÂÂ1902) to characterize him as the ¢ÂÂÂuncrowned king¢ÂÂÂ of the Republican Party. Nast defined American political cartooning in the nineteenth century. Through his work for Harper's Weekly, he popularized such American political symbols as the Republican elephant and the Democratic donkey. Through this image, Block argued that Americans, by turning their backs on the world, permitted global occupation by forces from both the political left and right. This cartoon was most likely produced in 1939, when the Soviet Union, briefly allied with the Axis powers joined Germany in attacking and conquering Poland. Block (1909-2001) had a cartooning career that spanned seven decades. By the late 1950s, increases in local, state and federal taxes as well as social security meant that the average family spent more on those than they did on food. Paying for national defense during the Cold War accounted for much of the increase. A prize-winning political cartoonist, Wood worked at the Richmond News Leader before moving to Pittsburgh, where he was the chief editorial cartoonist for the Pittsburgh Press from 1956 to 1965.
